In clockwise, is the Elliot House, Robert Frost, and John F. Kennedy.

At JFK's oath taking ceremony, Robert Frost had been asked to address the country. Frost, in the heat of the event, fumbles the lines to his own poem, 'The Gift Outright', and further goes onto address JFK, as "president elect John Finley", confusing him with the headmaster at the Elliot House. In certain parts of America, this made bigger headlines, than the President's oath itself.
